Call 16/2021

Announcement of public selection based on qualifications and interview for no. 1 Professionalizing fellowship in the field of “Definition of Quaternary evolution of the Italian offshore (METIQ project)”, by the section “Geophysics” – GEO of the National Institute of Oceanography and Applied Geophysics – OGS.

Description of the activities

The research will take place within the METIQ project (Evolutionary model of the Italian territory in the Quaternary) in collaboration with ISPRA, CNR and INGV and will be presented at the INQUA international conference which will take place in Rome in 2023. The aim of this research is to produce a digital model of the quaternary sequences of the Italian offshore in the form of a geological map at the scale of 1:500,000, using a GIS platform. The digital model will be populated with different information levels relating to the occurrence at seabed of specific geomorphological structures, e.g., gravitational movements, canyons, volcanoes, marine terraces, etc., and active faults; their distributions along the Italian continental margins will be mapped and, where possible, the different typologies of Quaternary deposits will be characterized. The drafting of the final geological map will be based on the collection and rereading of all the information available to date and mainly deriving from geological and thematic maps at different scales and from bibliography, synthesizing, harmonizing, and updating them. The main areas of study will be the northern Adriatic Sea, the Ionian Calabrian and Apulian margins and the Sicilian channel.

In order to carry out this research we require the following skills and competencies: ability to interact and interface with colleagues from other institutes and other disciplines; capability to manage the deadlines of the project independently and autonomously in close contact with the tutor; communication and teamwork skills.
